ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE HONG-KONG SUGAR REFINING TRADE.

sugar refluction in Hougkong, feeling that they had become quite a community in this colony. decided to unite together for one of those social gatherings which are common among those engaged in the same industry at home. There is feeling of fellowship among this small community which it would be difficult to find equalled among any other class. This arises to a large extent from the fact that nearly all of them hail from the same place, and in the old country have been familiar with the same scenes, or perhaps the same persons. Greenock is the great seat of the sugar refining industry in England, and there are few Europeans employed at the three refineries in this colony who do not claim that thriving town as their home. They are fellow countrymen, fellow townsmen; and fellow workmen, and in a place so far remote from the old associations these things form a bend which draw them close together in their sympathies, and it is not surprising that the first celebration organised by them on the model of their home gatherings should have been attended with the most signal success, and that it should have been so pleasant a reunion that it was decided afterwards to on deavour to make it an annual event. Last year the Chinese New Year's eve was the occasion of the first celebration, which took place at the Victoria Hotel. Everything went off with a success be youd the expectations of those concerned, and it was determined to have similar gatherings in future years. This year the committee, with the object of distributing their patronage, went to the Hongkorg Hotel, where Mr Greeley placed at their disposal the reading room and ante-room attached, on the first floor. In this room a long table was placed along the centre with a cross table at the head. and a dinner was served, in the style for that establishment is noted, that deserves more than a passing notice, as besides including all the delicacies of an ordinary first class dinner, the menu contained items which carried the thoughts of the Scots present back to their native place. He referred to the way they had distinguished them-, sives in the Soudan, and then passed on to speak of the Volunteers, with which branch of the service he said he was somewhat better acquainted. (Hear, hear). It seemed to him these events speke volumes for the harmony and good fellowship prevailing among those engaged in this industry. However much they might have to fight against each other in the interests of the respective companies which employed them, they could still, for one night in the year, lay aside their differences and enjoy themselves in a manner which would lead them to be oblivious of the fact Mother Seigel intimated to them, that "Over the Sunshine of Existence Hangs a Dark Cloud." (Laugh terand applause). He trusted they would be none the worse for that evening's enjoyment, or that if they felt any offects the next day they would notbe "Treated for the Wrong Complaint." (Renewed laughter). He was very pleased to see the sugar refining industry so well represented there that evening, and he thought it was a pity they could not have more opportunities of spending a few pleasant hours together. Amongst the presents which Don Alfonso gave to his first wife, Donna Mercedes, there was a magnificent ring, ornamented with a large black pearl encircled with diamonds. The Queen were it until the day of her death. The young King, after the loss of his first wife, presented the ring to his sister, the Infanta Pilar, who wore it until she died. The superstitions may easily have suspected, in such a land as Spain, that the ring itself was not wholly unconnected with the rapidly successive deaths of the two beautiful young ladies who had worn it. The King would not give it to a third lady, but he wore it himself until he also died. Queen Christina, who drew the ring from the finger of the dead monarch, debated for a while whether she would herself wear it in memory of him or would place it amongst the historic family jewels. She decided to take the latter course.

· With the uncertainty of life is mugled the breath of life that tells of an addition to our promptings of instinct are but the spontaneous voices of nature, and it is our duty to obey. But there still remains the question, can death be postponed by a single hour? Yes; for the world works in obedience to certain laws; and a study of these proves that those who have the judgment and the will to buckle on the shield, which A letter from Alexandria in the Indépendance nature places ready to their grasp, may ward off the insidious attacks of the implacable enemy of life, until, in a ripe old age, the vital faculties gradually decay, and the Angel of Peace glides softly into our presence, leading us, as it were, in a gentle slumber to the regions beyond the

What is this foe? There are few among us who have not been or are new to some extent its victims. Would the reader know if he, too, is under the ban of this frightful scourge? Let him ask himself whether he experiences any of the following symptoms:--

There are pains about the chest and sides, and sometimes in the back. The mouth has a bad taste, especially in the morning; and there are feelings of dulness and drowsiness. The appetite is poor, a sort of sticky slime collects about the teeth, there is a feeling as of a heavy load on the stomach, and sometimes a faint, all-gone sonsation at the pit of the stomach, which food does not satisfy. The eyes are sunken, the hands and feet become cold and feel clammy. After a while a cough sets in, at first dry, but attended in the course of a few months with expectoration stantly tired, and sleep seems to afford him no Manile rest.
